Cabinet Finish Characteristics

Veneer wood absorbs more stain than solid wood and can appear darker. Since some door styles are built with solid wood frames and veneer center panels, one can expect more color variation than doors with all solid components. Finishes will react to prolonged exposure to tobacco smoke, resulting in discoloration, which is especially noticeable on white and lighter finishes. Ovens and ranges emit heat and steam during their operation. To protect the finish of adjacent cabinets the use of heat shields is strongly recommended. Lighting can greatly affect the appearance of a finish, so it is recommended that you order a sample door in the species finish combination you prefer and view it in the light of your own environment vs. in the showroom or outdoors.

DOOR MATERIALS

Due to the natural beauty and inherent variability of trees, any solid or veneer wood will exhibit some variation in color and grain, and no two pieces are alike. Exposure to sunlight, smoke, household chemicals and other environmental conditions will affect the appearance of the finish over time.

Wood

CHERRY

Cherry is known for its unique and beautiful color, grain patterns, and distinctive features. These include small pin knots, pitch pockets, and grain variations appearing as waves or curls. These features distinguish Cherry and are common in this species. The wood itself includes both sapwood, which ranges from white to yellowish, and heartwood, which has a rich reddish-brown hue. As Cherry ages its appearance will noticeably darken and mellow in color. This change occurs faster than other species, particularly with exposure to natural light.

CHARACTER CHERRY

Character Cherry's rustic appearance and unique characteristics are emphasized by randomly occurring variously sized open knots, pin knots, pitch pockets, worm holes and tracks, gum pockets and streaks, mineral stains and streaks, burls, blemishes, sapwood, cluster knots, and structural splits. The amount of character will vary across each door and cannot be guaranteed, making each cabinet and space unique. Like Cherry, Character Cherry colors can range from white to pink to a dark brown and it will show the effects of age faster than other species, causing its appearance to darken over time particularly with exposure to light.

MAPLE

Maple is known for its typically straight, uniform grain pattern. While generally a consistent creamy white it can have slight variation from a bright white to a light pink or a light reddish brown. Maple will occasionally show small mineral streaks, bird's eye, and wavy or burl graining. As maple ages and is exposed to light it will take on a slight change in color to an amber or yellowish hue.

CHARACTER MAPLE

Character Maple's overall rustic appearance and unique characteristics include randomly occurring, variously sized knots, pin holes, worm holes and tracks, gum and bark pockets, sugar tracks, heartwood, and mineral streaks. Cluster knots and open knots could also be a feature. The amount of character marks will vary across each door and cannot be guaranteed, making each cabinet and space unique.

OAK

Red Oak is an open-pored wood which varies from close knit vertical grain to prominent and arched patterns. Oak can have drastic color variation featuring dark mineral streaks, flecking, and small pink pinholes. Wellborn's lumber processing produces product with straighter grains, and reduced widths of cathedrals than most other cabinet lines. Oak will darken over time particularly with exposure to light.

HICKORY

Hickory is an exceptionally dense and strong hardwood which features a coarse, straight grained texture. It is characterized by striking, contrasting colors ranging from creamy white to dark brown and black, potentially within the same piece of wood. All tones of Hickory could include mineral streaks darker in color. Extreme random variation in color and grain is expected. Because of this color variation it is recommended to view a wide selection of samples to become familiar with the overall final aesthetic of purchased items. Hickory will darken over time particularly with exposure to light.

Metal

ALUMINUM

Aluminum is characteristically lightweight and depending on the color chosen could also have high reflectivity, enhancing the illumination in your home.

WellCore MDF

MEDIUM DENSITY FIBERBOARD

Using high pressure and temperatures, WellCore MDF is formed by combining wood fibers with a wax resin binder to form panels making it more dense than standard particle board. This makes WellCore MDF a durable, smooth surface for cabinetry.

Decorative Laminate Veneer

Decorative Laminate Veneer (DLV) has an MDF particle core and utilizes thermally fused melamine panels and a protective polyester resin coating, resulting in a strong material engineered to reduce expansion and contraction. Our DLV collection includes the laminates and melamines listed below.

MATTE LAMINATE

Matte Laminate melamine is created by laminating decorative paper to an MDF core then applying a super-matte finish with a silky-smooth touch.

HIGH GLOSS LAMINATE

High Gloss laminate is created by laminating decorative paper to an MDF core then applying a high gloss finish to the outer panel and a matte finish to the inside panel.

HEAVY TEXTURED WOOD LOOK MELAMINE

Heavy Textured Melamine is created by laminating decorative paper to an MDF core then applying a deeply embossed thermo-structured surface that emulates natural ridges, and the deep furrows of wood forming a textured laminated surface.

HIGH GLOSS ACRYLIC LAMINATE

High Gloss Acrylic laminate is created by laminating decorative paper onto a high quality super-refined engineered MDF core with PUR glue. The high gloss acrylic has a mirror-like reflective surface.

EMBOSSSED MALAMINE

Embossed Melamine is created by laminating decorative paper to an MDF core for a Thermally Fused Laminated or High Pressure Laminated surface with dual-sided textured grain and is considered a high-impact surface.
